

Carlo Tocco

Olivia Gulyas

Derek Barnes

Joanne Hakim

Austin Burns

Hailey Christ

Professor H. Culik

English-Communications 1180

31st August, 2017

Purpose & Problem Statement

The purpose of the course is to help us expand our writing strategies and break old writing habits taught in high school, with that being said we can use the ideas of others and our own to strengthen a point. With sharing ideas, we can get people to think critically about something that may be out of their comfort zone. With all of these strategies being used it would help us to write about something that we are interested in.

The purpose of the assignment is to set the fundamentals of the three step process (TEQ, P&P, Prospectus) analyzes other authors work and combining it with your own, The TEQ sheets allows us to find out what the author says and thinks, it shows us the important point of what the author is trying to make. It shows people that social class determines the level of education, we can compare this to our own experience.

Thinking critically about an unfamiliar problem may seem foreign to a lot of people. With that, have you ever thought about the effects that a social-class has an education? For many this thought doesn't even cross their minds. Its important to discuss the fact that your child may be getting cheated out of something very important, that is their education. Do people even realize that their children are being treated differently than wealthy upper-class kids? Why is that? Does money really make or break someone's future? You don't hear many people talking about how important class is to a quality education. This topic needs to be discussed more between individuals in order to get an understanding on why their child is being "set up" for failure.