

Gabriel Martin

Stacey Burton

Brittany Stack

James Nowak

Professor Hugh Culik

English 1180-fall

8-31-2017

Purpose and Problem Statement #2

Purpose Statement:

What is the purpose of the course? How is it connected to the assignment? The purpose of the course is to learn from the mistakes that you make in your assignments. Not only that but as a student learns it is their task to make each new essay/assignment better than the last. The assignment and the course are connected through the learning of new things and seeing things at a new perspective. It is also our job view and critique others writing, to help make their assignment better. This is the purpose of the course and assignment.

Problem Statement:

If people saw how the lower social classes were being treated, would they treat them differently in school? There are many different problems in Jean Anyon and Shaun Johnson's writings, many of which include higher social classes being treated with respect and privileges. While the lower classes are treated with less respect and no privileges. Can this be changed? And if so how should we go about doing it? In Jean Anyon's writing he made it very clear that the higher class would do anything to keep the working class from having what they have. But how far would they go to prevent that. There are many problems that are occurring in these writings and many unanswered questions.